AUSTRALIAN HISTORY
of
TEST MATCHES
1976 - 2018

Attached is the collection of results of test matches played by Australia against FIT Members. The first official test was held at Carlaw Park, Auckland in 1976. These records trace the history not only of the Trans Tasman battles but the Japan and Canadian Tests series.

On Saturday 12th November 1988, New Zealand scored what could only be described as a defeat for Australia, a nil all draw in the first game of the Mens Open division. The jubilation of the New Zealand players saw them phoning the results back home within minutes of the completion of the game.

But, it wasn't until Saturday 8th May 1993 that New Zealand scored its first test victory over Australia. Who can remember Australia leading two - nil, then New Zealand coming back to lead three - two when the hooter sounded. The wild scenes of triumph overshadowed what was still happening on the field. The ball had not gone dead and New Zealand's quick thinking saw them run the length of the field to record a four - two conquest of Australia.

It wasn't until February 2013 when a Super Test Series encompassing Youth, Open and Masters saw New Zealand win the test series for a second time. Of the Fourteen series played between the two countries, Australia have enjoyed success to the tune of twelve to two with New Zealand wrapping up their second series win after only game two of the Mens and Mixed and the third game of the Mens 30 on second last day of competition in 2013.

In 2016 the series was hosted by New Zealand who failed to win a match on home soil. Australia repeated the result in 2017 in Queensland in both the Open and Age divisions. It wasn't until the 2018 series in the Mens Game 2 that a 35 game winning streak came to an end when NZ defeated Australia 7-6
